

Community-Based Participatory Research Program
Northwestern University Clinical and Translational Studies Institute and
The Programs in Public Health Diversity Program in conjunction with Environment, Culture, and Conservation, a Division of Science at The Field Museum

Community-Based Participatory Research Basics: Workshop for Academic Partners

June 5, 2008
8:30am - 1:00pm
Mecklenburg Conference Room
251 E. Huron Street, 3rd Floor
RSVP: d-somlyo@northwestern.edu

For more information: <http://www.nucats.northwestern.edu/centers/cerc/>

This session will cover the basic principles of community-based participatory research (CBPR) and discuss strategies for developing and sustaining community-engaged research partnerships. Presenters will share diverse case study examples of projects using a CBPR approach and the projects' outcomes and lessons learned. Participants will also learn about available resources through Northwestern's CBPR Program and have the opportunity to speak with presenters and staff about their ideas and questions.

Featured Speakers:

- Adam Becker, PhD Executive Director, Consortium to Lower Obesity in Chicago (CLOCC)
- Lisa Henry-Reid, MD, Chair, Division of Adolescent Medicine, John H. Stroger Hospital of Cook County
- Sylvia Hood-Washington, MSE, PhD, ND, Research Associate Professor University of Illinois Chicago School of Public, Environmental & Occupational Health Services
- P. Rafael Hernández-Arias, PhD, Assistant Professor, Department of Sociology, DePaul University
- Madelyn Iris, PhD Director of the Leonard Schanfield Research Institute, CJE SeniorLife, Adjunct Associate Professor in the Departments of Preventive Medicine and Psychiatry, Feinberg School of Medicine
- Howard Rosing, PhD, Executive Director, Irwin W. Steans Center for Community-Based Service Learning, DePaul University
- Melissa Simon, MD, MPH, Assistant Professor, Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Feinberg School of Medicine, Northwestern University